Preface

Dr. Richard M. Lowden compiled an index to authors and subjects for the first 20 volumes of Taxon in 1973. He has now produced for us an index to the personal names cited in the first 30 volumes (1951–1981) of our journal. The sheer size of this undertaking is overwhelming as is abundantly shown by the 816 pages of this new index. The value of this work is manifold. Taxon is a source of biographical and bibliographical information to practically all active plant taxonomists of the years covered by the index, but provides such information also for botany and botanists from the seventeenth century onward. This new index opens up this important information to the general user. Another aspect of the immense coverage of this index is that it provides retrospectively to Linnaeus a citation-index to authors on systematic botany as reflected by thirty volumes of a twentieth century journal exclusively devoted to this discipline.

There is no doubt that this new index will be used extensively in plant systematics and related fields. Dr. Lowden has rendered a signal service to the Association. The officers of I.A.P.T. tender their profoundest thanks to him for his unselfish and devoted efforts and congratulate him with this publication which will benefit many plant systematists now and in the years to come.

Introduction

The principal objective for compiling this index to personal names was to make more accessible to TAXON's users the wealth of biographic and bibliographic information published in TAXON during the past thirty years (1951–1981). I felt a real and urging desire to elaborate this index knowing that the diversity of personal name sources relating to botanical history, classical taxonomic literature and contemporary reference materials reflects the international nature of TAXON's contributors and subscribers.

There are over 25,000 persons listed in this index with the exception of those names of authors cited after scientific plant names. On the other hand, a great number of authors of taxa are included from discussions on nomenclature. Names of authors listed as references, literature cited, etc. are cited at least once in accordance with page numbers to these sections without additional pages cited for their mention throughout the text of a given publication.

Due to the variable way in which names are published, there has been no attempt to consolidate entries. Thus, all the original spelling of names have been respected. Less complete names are listed first, recognizing that without checking their identity these names could relate to more than one person. The more complete name forms follow for which a particular search was made.

Diacritical marks have been ignored and for the most part prefixal wording of last names (i.e. da, de, la, le, van, von, etc.) do not have priority in the alphabetical sequence. When convenient, dual last names as well as last names having spelling variants were placed under one name. Users must recognize that there are spelling variants and orthographic mistakes in names that may cause one to overlook a particular entry. For this reason, it is necessary that entries be reviewed closely in order to obtain the maximum number of data relating to a given person.

It has been a real pleasure to compile this index knowing that my overwhelming dedication to this ambitious task has been rewarded by the fact that the members of the International Association for Plant Taxonomy now have an index to personal names which helps to elucidate some of our most prominent botanical authorities in the science of plant taxonomy.
